It's been a pleasure working with everyone at Twelve Bridges. I am sorry I just can't make it fit into my schedule working at my office also. Each week something comes up and I know you must have someone there each day. Thank you for the opportunity. I regret that I must resign from my position as campus supervisor.

You have a terrific group of young people and a beautiful new campus! Have a awesome year and keep me in mind if you need a substitute. I would be more than happy to come back to your campus to visit!

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED the Western Placer Unified School District supports Proposition 1D on the November 7, 2006 ballot.

Yes on 1D Fact Sheet

1) Yes on 1D is an investment in our schools, in our children and in California's future.

- Providing a quality education for our kids is the most important thing we can do to invest in their future. The best way to grow our economy and create good-paying jobs is to create world-class public schools that give our students the skills they need to succeed in the workforce.

That's why parents, teachers, business groups and seniors have joined to actively support Yes on 1D.

- Many students who don't plan on going to college need career education and vocational training, but our schools don't have facilities to accommodate them. Yes on 1D updates our schools with new technology and builds vocational education facilities so that all students are given the skills they need to get a job and succeed in life.

- To prepare for the jobs of the future, our children need to learn with the latest technology. Yes on 1D will help pay for wiring classrooms and providing 21st Century technology for our students.

- California's community colleges and state universities (UC and CSU) continue to grow exponentially. With community colleges providing instruction to over 2 million students every year, and California's universities expected to grow to accommodate nearly 650,000 students, we need to provide funding to modernize and upgrade teaching and research facilities to remain competitive with other states

- For every dollar California invests to get students in and through college, the state's economy receives a $3 net return on that investment.

- This measure is so important for California's future that both candidates for Governor, Phil Angelides and Arnold Schwarzenegger, as well as a bipartisan majority of the Legislature, all agree – Yes on 1D.

2) Yes on 1D will make schools safer and relieve overcrowding.

- The California State Architect says that more than 7,000 schools aren't earthquake-safe. The safety of our students should be our top priority. Yes on 1D will allocate funds to retrofit and upgrade our schools and colleges to ensure they can withstand the impact of natural disasters like earthquakes.

- California classrooms are overcrowded. Students are trying to learn in schools that house 75% more students than they were built to accommodate. By building more classrooms, Yes on 1D will relieve overcrowding, help reduce class sizes and give students a real opportunity to learn.

- With half a million children born in California every year, many school districts continue to grow and many more are severely overcrowded. Prop. 1D provides $1.9 billion for design, inspection and construction of projects to adequately house students. If we don't build new schools now and plan for the future, the overcrowding will only get worse.

- This measure includes funding directed at our kids' safety, including school security, playground safety, removal of asbestos, and replacing leaky and dangerous roofs.

- With restrooms leaking and buildings in disrepair, we send our students the wrong message – we tell them education is not important. A clean, well-maintained and safe school sends the right message: that education is a high priority.

3) Yes on 1D provides strict accountability to ensure that the money is spent properly.

- Prop. 1D contains strong accountability provisions to guarantee that every single dollar goes to improving schools for students in California.

- Funds from 1D will be subjected to independent audits, and misusing them is a crime, punishable by time in jail. This information will be made available to the public so taxpayers can ensure their money is spent properly and will NOT go to waste.

SUBJECT AREA:

Discussion/Action

REQUESTED BY:

Scott Leaman, District Superintendent

ENCLOSURES:

Yes

MEETING DATE:

October 17, 2006

BACKGROUND:

Using the process and forms approved at prior board meetings, the final refinancing (called refunding) has been completed for an existing COP of $8,000,000.00. This is the first phase of obtaining financing for new school facilities. This refinancing freed district collateral to use on the next COP. The next step in the process is evaluating our needs and securing appropriate financing the district can support based on our ongoing facility income.

API numbers don't always give a true picture

By: Jamie Trump/the news messenger

Statistics don't always tell the whole story.

Take First Street School's API scores - the Lincoln elementary school posted the lowest totals in the Western Placer Unified School District.

But the numbers don't show what the school is up against, said principal Ruben Ayala.

At most schools in the district, about 90 percent of students speak English as their primary language. But at First Street, Ayala said an estimated 52 percent of students are English learners, meaning English is their second or third language.

"When you're looking at that, you see you're not comparing apples to apples," Ayala said. "If you look at First Street School and you look at a school in Granite Bay, that's not comparing apples to apples."

The school's overall API score is 683, much lower than the state's target standard of 800.

However, when broken down into subgroups the problem is clear, Ayala said. Of the 262 students tested, 153 were English learners. Reports show white, English-speaking students scored 814. English learners scored 620.

"That makes sense to me," said Ayala. "Studies show it takes five to seven years to be proficient in a second language, and for many of our students, they've only had two years of English. It's hard to take a test designed for an English speaking student when you don't know the language."

"Those kids who are linguistically ready to take the test are doing very well," he said.

In its seventh year, First Street School offers a plethora of programs to help its English learners.

One such program is the school's structured English immersion classrooms where students are delivered the standard curriculum in English but also receive support in their native language.

Fourth-grade teacher Colleen Gonzales works in one of these classrooms. Of her 28 students, 24 are English learners. She said there are 40 English learners in the fourth grade alone.

Gonzales says a lot of her job is intervention in the classroom. For example, she gives vocabulary tests weekly, not just in English classes but also in science, history and math.

She also works with new students, including one this year who just moved to Lincoln from Mexico City, Mexico and only speaks a few words of English.

karina williams/THE news messenger First Street Elementary School second grade teacher, Alicia Hernandez, uses cue cards with photos and English words to teach her Spanish speaking students english. It is Kevin Miguel's turn to read in English what is on his card.

With these students, Gonzales, who only learned Spanish six years ago, starts off class explaining lessons in English and then repeats them in Spanish. Gonzales' Spanish lessons throughout the year until it's almost nonexistent.

"The students, they're all happy," she said. "They're being pushed, but not overwhelmed."

Gonzales said her school also works with parents. First Street School holds monthly meetings for Spanish speaking parents every third Thursday of the month at 6 p.m.

"We explain more of what's going on, what English-speaking parents can read in the newspaper," she said.

Ayala said students come to First Street from across the district because of the campus' good reputation. He hopes parents don't judge First Street solely on their API scores.

"I think if we switched staff, if we took the teachers and staff at Twelve Brides and traded campuses, I don't think the scores would be that much different because ... it's not that we're doing anything wrong. I really do believe that. It's what we're working with," he said.

There are 450 students currently enrolled at First Street, which employs 21 teachers.

"I think we have a great staff," said Ayala, who has been the principal since First Street opened. "Sometimes you look at a school that hasn't done too well on their API scores and you see a lot of teachers who are not qualified ... but that's not the case for us. I really do think we're meeting the needs of our students."

So does Gonzales.

"I'm seriously heartbroken (about the API scores) because I don't know of any other school that works so hard," the Lincoln resident said. "If you come to my school you will see three or four teachers always working on the weekends. If you come to my school at 3 or 4 p.m., you'll still see most of the staff there."

She's worried that people won't look beyond the statistics.

"I'm heart broken that people will not see it as the school it is," she said. "I was really depressed about it. We're getting punished for these numbers and it's not fair."

Regardless, Gonzales said the teachers at First Street share a passion for teaching that no one can take away.

"You can take our test scores and make us look bad and you can say we're not good, but you can't take the soul or the heart out of the staff," she said. "All the teachers here are here because they want to be. The teachers want to help; they want to teach these kids. That's what the kids get here that they don't get anywhere else - the love and individual attention. That's what makes us different, I guess."
